- Flat brushes: These brushes have a flat, rectangular shape and are ideal for creating bold, even strokes. They are also great for applying gesso or primers.

- Round brushes: Round brushes are versatile and can be used for a variety of techniques, including detail work, blending, and creating texture.
- Filbert brushes: Filbert brushes have a flat, oval shape and are excellent for blending colours and creating soft edges.
- Angled brushes: Angled brushes are ideal for painting in corners or tight spaces.

Colours

The colours you choose will significantly impact the mood and atmosphere of your paintings. There are three primary colours (red, yellow, and blue) and three secondary colours (green, orange, and purple). By mixing these colours, you can create an infinite range of hues.

When choosing colours, consider the colour wheel. The colour wheel is a visual representation of the relationships between colours. It can help you select colours that complement each other and create a harmonious composition.

Easy Projects for Beginners

Still Life Painting

Still life painting is a great way to practice your basic painting skills. Choose a simple arrangement of objects, such as a bowl of fruit or a vase of flowers. Set up your still life in a well-lit area and focus on capturing the shapes, colours, and textures of the objects.

Landscape Painting

Landscape painting is another excellent option for beginners. Choose a simple landscape, such as a park or a beach. Sketch the basic shapes of the landscape and then begin painting in the colours. Don't worry about perfection, just focus on capturing the overall feel of the scene.
